PROJECTS

Multi-Class Adaptive Active Learning for Predicting Student Anxiety

June, 2024-Present

Role : Frontend Developer

- This project focuses on enhancing predictive models for student anxiety using the Student Anxiety Dataset from Kaggle. It involves implementing and comparing baseline classification algorithms such as KNN, Logistic Regression, XGBoost, Naive Bayes, and Random Forest. The project collaborates with educational psychologists to integrate insights and ensure the models' relevance. Additionally, a Multi-Class Adaptive Active Learning approach is employed to dynamically refine the classification process, thereby improving learning efficiency and accuracy.
